THE LOVE'S CHOICE.

Some love a face of charming grace,
A fairy form of Angel-beauty;
But for my part give me the heart
Inspired by candor, love, and duty,
A homely look is like a book,
Plain outside, but within it
Are gems of thought by wisdom wrought,
A higher worth to win it.

Some love a face of marble grace,
No inner fount revealing;
No joy or grief, however brief,
Nor gush of warmer feeling.
The moon'light's glow o'er fields of snow
To some minds may be tender;
But give to me the sunlight free
That gilds the flowers with splendor.

Some love a face of smiling grace,
Bestowed on all at pleasure;
But love lies deep, and oft must weep.
Oh, win that sacred treasure.
While killing time, time steals our prime,
And strength we need in sorrow;
The darkest night is turned to light
When love shines on the morrow.

A PLUCKY WIFE.

SHE MEETS THE GAMBLER WHO WON HER HUSBAND'S MONEY AND A SCENE ENSUES.

It was one of the handsomest packets on the river, and among the passengers bound for Vicksburg were a Georgian and his wife, who have relatives in Mississippi.

He was a large-sized, handsome-looking man, and she was a pleasant-looking little woman, with blue eyes and short chesnut curls. One would have said that she would have screamed at a tiff on the boat.

He sat smoking with other gentlemen after she had retired to her staterroom, and the cabin was entirely clear of ladies, when some one proposed a game of cards. In ten minutes after half a dozen men were shuffling cards over cabin tables, and the Georgian was matched against a stranger to all on board. He was a quiet, courteous, well-dressed man, and had been taken for a traveler in search of health. He was lucky with his cards, but he did not propose playing for stakes. It was the netted Georgian who proposed it. He called himself a champion hand at poker, and when he found he had met his equal he determined to test the stranger's financial metal.

They had fifty dollars on the table when the captain looked into the cabin. He caught the Georgian's eye and gave him to understand that his opponent was a river blackleg, but the other gentlemen had dropped their cards and crowded around, money was up, and the information had come too late. Besides, the Georgian was doing well enough, and he flattered himself that he could teach the courteous blackleg a lesson.

It was a very quiet group around the table, and after the play had continued for fifteen minutes, the gentlemen spoke in whispers, and some of them were reminded of old times on the Mississippi, when gamblers had the full run of every boat.

The Georgian had luck with him from the start, and while he looked smiling and confident the gambler appeared to grow excited and uneasy. His money was raked across the table until the Georgian had $200 in greenbacks before him. The stakes had been light up to this time, both men seeming to fear each other's skill. The Georgian proposed to increase them, and the gambler agreed. In ten minutes the latter had his $200 back. Luck had turned. The Georgian lost $50; then $80; then $80; then $100.

The gambler's face wore a quiet smile, as the Georgian became nervous. His hands trembled as he held up the cards, and his face was wet with moisture.

"Come, gentlemen,' said one of the group, "let's have a general hand for amusement, and then turn in."

The Georgian looked with a fixed glance, and replied;

"I have lost $400; he must give me a fair show.'

The play went on. The heap of greenbacks at the gambler's right hand grew larger. Once in a while the Georgian won, but he lost ten dollars for every one gained. He finely laid down his cards, pulled a roll of bills from a breast pocket and counted out $300. This was his pile. In less than ten minutes every dollar of it had been added to the gambler's heap.

"Gentlemen, will you smoke?' asked the gambler, as he turned around and drew his cigar case.

"I am sorry for my friend,' he continued, biting at the end of a cigar, "but you will agree that the play was fair.'

The Georgian had passed out on the promenade deck. The gambler turned to his stack of bills and was counting them when there was a sharp exclamation, the sound of a brief struggle, and the little woman with blue eyes and chesnut curls entered the cabin. She was half undressed, a shawl thrown over her shoulders, and she had a revolver in her hand.

No one had seen her leave her staterroom and cross the cabin. No one knew that her husband had the revolver in his hand as she softly came upon him. "Go back, he whispered, 'I a coming in a moment!'

With swift motion she seized the weapon, wrenched it from his grasp, and as she came down the cabin to the table at which the gambler sat, and around which half a dozen men yet lingered, her blue eyes were full of fire.

The gambler looked up. The hammer of the revolver came up with a double click. A white arm stretched out, and the muzzle of the revolver looked straight into the gambler's face. He turned pale; the men fell back. For half a minute the deep silence was broken only by the faint splash of the paddle wheels.

"Go!" she said.

He looked into her flaming eyes as if he could bluff her.

"Go!"

He rose up and reached for the money.

"Leave it!" she whispered, making a threatening motion with the revolver. He retreated back. She followed. Foot by foot he backed across the cabine, the muzzle of the revolver always on a line with his face. He backed through the door on the promenade deck, and the railing was there.

"Jump,' she whispered.

The boat was running along within three hundred feet of the shore. Over the rail to the water was a terrible leap.

"You can have the money, he said,

"Jump,' she repeated.

"I will not.'

The arm came up a little, and the light from the cabin showed him a cold, strange, determined look on her face. He turned about, shivered, and was over the rail, leaping for out and unable to suppress a cry of alarm as he felt himself going down. The boat swept along, her arm fell, and re-entering the cabin she sat down, leaned her head on the table and wept bitterely. The passengers said she was a "brick." Was she?

A LIVELY OLD BOY.

He wanted to see things Whizz, and he finally had his way.

The Virginia Nev. Enterprise says: A queer looking, wiry little old chap arrayed chiefly in a hunting shirt and a minkskin cap, the other day made his way to the bar of one of our first class saloons. His 'keg' was evidently full to overflowing, yet he was athirst. Cocking one eye upon the bar keeper and another on the array of bottles before him, he thrust his right hand deep into his breeches pocket and stirred up a stunning gingle of coin. Turning then to a gentleman standing near, the little old man said:

'Stranger, excuse me, but will yer jine me in a drink?'

The stranger declined, upon the plea that he had just had one. The little old man then asked another, and another, all around until each man in the room had been invited; but all declined, some from one cause and some from another. Finally, after the whole crowd had refused to join him, the old man broke out with:

'Well, for my part I am like that old patriarch that the Bible tells of. He was one of my kind. When he had a frolic he wanted to see things whiz!'

'What one of the old patriarchs was that?' asked a gentleman present, who thought it might be worth while to call the old gentleman out.

'I'm not much of a biblest,' said the old man, 'but I mean the old cock that lived somewhere down in Galilee or Nazareth. The old fellow, you, know, that give the big blow out when his oldest gal got married; he killed a lot of oxen and sheep and calves and goats and had a tearing barbecue, inviting all the neighbors for miles around. But devil a one come near the house. All too durned high toned. Then what does the old chap do but git up on his ear and swear that the thing shall be a success. So he sends his hired man out to gather up all the old bums and stiffs, the dead beats, the lame, halt and blind,' saying:

'Bring 'em all in and we'll have a h—ll of a tear.'

'Then the hungry and thirsty old bums and gutter snipes all come chargin' in from the back alleys and tumblin' up from the lumber yards, and they piled in and made it hot for that lunch and whiskey and lager beer, and they fiddled and danced till they all got blind drunk and broke up in a row. But the gal had a staviu' lively wedding after all. Now that's the kind of a man I am. Ef you gentlemen won't drink with me, damme, I'll go out and bring in the bums and old stiffs, and we'll devour the free lunch, drink ourselves disorderly and have a regular weddin' feast right hyar.'

This little oration had the desired effect, and all in the room took a drink with the old chap, when he exultantly cried, bringing his fist down on the counter, as he emptied his glass:

'Damme, you don't know old Sol Winters down hyar, but he's a purty big Injun when he's not home, up in Union Valley.'

To wait for a girl and then not git 'er.'

DREADFUL TRAGEDY IN BALDWIN COUNTY ALABAMA.

A NEIGHBORHOOD VENDETTA FOUGHT OUT.

Partial reports of a terrible occurrence near the line of the Mobile and Montgomery Railroad reached us by telegraph from the Junction on Tuesday morning, but we could learn nothing definite. Yesterday we were called upon by Mr. W. J. Van Kirk, of Millvne, a Surveyor who was on duty near the scene of the tragedy, but not a witness to its occurrence. He visited the battle ground, however, was present at the funeral of the victims, and give us an intelligent report of the dreadful affair.

Greenberry Bryers and James Hadley, two men of considerable means and both large owners of stock, had been at feud for some years in consequence of misunderstandings caused by the intermixing of their cattle which "use" in the same range. On Monday Bryers, Sr; with his son Larry, was plowing about 150 yards from the house, when Hadley, Sr; accompanied by a party of five others, comprising his son "Dink," two other sons, and his son-in-law Bud Pricher and Thos. Stewart, all armed with shot guns rode up near the fence and said they had "come to settle the matter." Bryers and his son were unarmed, but the father, after some angry words had been exchanged, caught up a piece of pine root, a foot and a half long, and getting over the fence, his son followed him, advanced toward the party. As he approached them he was shot down and instantly killed, and his son who ran to his father as he fell was instantly killed. Joseph Bryers then came out of the house with a double barrel shot gun, but both barrels missed fire and he was shot dead. Meanwhile Dink Hadley rode toward the house, sprang from his horse and got behind a pine tree to await the coming of another son, John Bryers, who advanced from the house under fire with two guns. He droped one of them and sprang to a post in the road which did not shelter more than a third of his person and exchanged fires with Dink Hadley about thirty-five yards off, the rest of the attacking party meanwhile firing on him from a distance. At his second fire Hadley fell, but got up and was attempting to reload, but seeing Bryers run back and get his other gun he scrambled upon his horse and rejoined his party and rode away with them, John firing into them as they left and wounding old Hadley in the shoulder. Dink Hadley's wound was in the knee. John was wounded in the head, arm and foot, but not dangerously. Three shots struck the post by which he stood. While the fight was going on near the house, Wylie, the younger son of the Bryers family, ran to where his father and brother Larry had fallen and was shot down, the wound being in the thigh and dangerous. The summary of the affair is a father and two sons murdered and two sons wounded, on one side; and, on the other, a father and one son wounded. We are told that Mr. Bryers was much respected, being a leading man in religious affairs in the neighborhood, and that Hadley had always been deemed a respectable person. The dead were buried on Tuesday, a large assemblage being present. No inquest was held, it "not being thought necessary, the facts of the crimes being so plain."

Tuesday a posse of ten men, provided with warrents for the arrest of the murderers, went to the Hadley settlement but found their residences deserted.

The locality of these occurrence is near the Florida line, four miles west of Perdido station, or about midway between the Junction and Tensas Bridge.—Pensacola Gazette.

THE "LOST CAUSE."

There have been mountains of nonsense, written and spoken, on the subject of "the lost cause," as the failure to defend Southern civilization is called. The simple truth is, the South made two fatal mistakes in the matter in issue—first, in the mode selected, the seperation of States, and second, in the surender of the Southern armies. They could not submit to Lincoln's election, of course, but they should have left a bridge between themselves and the same men of the North, and more vital still, they never should have disarmed with such a foe in their front. What were the total annihilation of Lee's and Johnston's armies, in view of the stupendous martyrdom of six millions of people since? Indeed, the immediate martyrdom of Lee's eighteen thousand half starved and worn out victims would have saved the land not only from the awful ruin brought on the South, but the impending horrors yet to be brought upon the North. These are the mistakes, the sold mistakes, which, if Mr. Davis had reached the trans-Mississippi armies might, at least this latter one, have been avoided, for unlike General Lee, who never really understood the Abolition power, Mr. Davis did so, and would have secured guarantees before disarming.—Day Book.

SPOTTED TAIL.

A ROMANCE OF THE FOREST—LOVE OF HIS DAUGHTER AND HER DEATH FROM A BROKEN HEART.

During the latter years of the war, part of Spotted Tail's family remained for a time at Fort Laramie, and with them was his favorite daughter, a young girl just budding into womanhood. The fort was then garrisoned by companies of Ohio regiment of volunteer cavalry. Among the officers of this regiment was a young man of good appearance and pleasant manners, and with whom the chief's daughter fell in love. Her passion does not seem to have been reciprocated by the young soldier, and he did all in his power to convince her he could not marry her, and therefore it would be wrong in him to pay his addresses to her. But the infatuated girl would not believe, and could not understand why she, a princes, and the daughter of the powerful chief on the plains, was not a suitable wife for the soldier. Day after day she would dress herself with scrupulous care, and come to the fort to see her beloved. It was pitiable to observe her, as hour after hour she would sit on the doorstep of the young officer's quarters, waiting for him to come out. At other times she would follow him about the parade ground like a dog seeming perfectly happy if she could only be near him and enjoy the poor privilege of looking at him.

Spotted Tail hearing of the strange conduct of his daughter, and deeply mortified at her want of self respect, hastened to the fort, and putting her in charge of some kind friends, bade them carry her off into the Rocky Mountains, where a portion of his tribe dwelt, and endeavored in every way to make her forget her unfortunate love. She went away meekly enough but fell into a deep melancholy, from which no effort of friends could arouse her—Presently she refused to take any food, and pined way to a mere skeleton.

One day a courier, whose horse was white with foam, sought the great chief and told him that his daughter was dying of a broken heart, and wished to see him once more before she passed to the happy spirit land. Away over mountain and stream hurried the chief and paused not for food or rest until he had reached the bedside of his beloved child. He found her still alive but fast sinking, and she bid him sit close beside her and hold her flesh less hands in his while she told him all her simple story of love and suffering and a broken heart. She then said: 'I shall soon be at rest, my father, and with those of our kindred who have gone before. In that beautiful land I will wait for you, and you will soon come to join me, dear father for your locks are whitened with years of care, you are fast growing old and tired. You are a great chief and have yet many warriors, but the pale faces are more numerous than the leaves of the forest and I pray you to cease from warring with them. Spare your people, my chief, rest a little while in peace, and you will have reached the end of your journey of life, and come to join me in the happy home to which I am now going. The pale faces are his people, and between you and them I hope war will never come again. And, O my father and my chief, when I am dead, take my poor wasted body and lay it on the hill beside the fort where I learned to love so well.'' The pulseless hand grew cold as the great chief promised his child all she asked of him, then the lustrous eyes glazed over, the thin lips ceased to move, the smile fled from the wasted face, and the Indian girl was dead.

The heart-broken chief bid the attendants dress the body of the princess for burial, and on the shoulders of stout warriors it was carried to Laramie and laid to rest among the pale faces, one of whose race she had so fatally loved. Her grave is still pointed out to the traveller, and there it will long remain a monument of the saddest story of the plains. Spotted Tail often speaks of his dear dead daughter with affectionate remembrance, and once in a great counsel held with the the whites at Laramie he said: Were not the hopelessness of resistance, and the dictates of policy sufficient to restrain me from acts of war, the pledge I made to my dead child in her dying hour would cause me to keep at peace with your people.''

Evil thoughts in the soul of either man or woman, like oil in water, will rise to the top. No perfections or deceit can amalgamate with virtue so that they will remain concealed.

Nothing is so great an instance, of ill-manners as flattery. If you flatter all the company, you please none; if you flatter only one or two, you affront the rest.

Most people would succeed in small things, if they were not troubled with great ambitions.

GOING WEST.

They entered Vicksburg just at dark. The two mules before the covered wagon leaned against each other for support, and a man having any knowledge of mules, would have said that a lunch of scrap iron would have been a God send to them. There was a big dog under the wagon, and he looked around in a suspicious, frightened way, as if expecting an attack from some quarter.

Peeping out from the wagon was a woman and three children. Her face was as yellow as ochre and as sharp as a plantation hoe, and if the children had had a bit of bacon for months past, their looks didn't show it.

'We're a sad family' replied the man as he returned from the grocery with a pound of crackers and a bit of cheese.

'Anything bad happened' asked the reporter.

You see that woman in the wagon thar. Well, she weighed a hundred and sixty pounds when we left North Carolina a year ago. Thar she is now, gone down to a shadder, and you couldn't hear her holler across the road!'

'Yes, she does look bad.'

'And thar's the three children—fell away to bones and hide and ha'r. That' used to be seven. The rest ar' planted over thar' across the river!'

'Well, that is bad.'

'And that's them mules,' continued the stranger, his voice growing husky. 'Thar' was a time when they was jist ole lightning; had to tie 'em up out door for fear they'd kick the stable down in North Carolina. They don't look like it now, but they was once able to run a plow into the side so deep that it took a nigger a day to dig down to the handles!'

'They seem worn out now.'

'And gaze on that dog—on poor Timothy!' continued the man, brushing a tear from his left eye—'that's what takes the pluck'o me! When I brought that dog from old Norf Caroliny the taller fried out of him as he walked, and when he sot his teeth on to anything, it had to come or die. And what is he now? What's his boun den' step, his fat, his grace?'

'You had bad luck then?'

'Yes things sot again' us from the start. The rain drowned the crops out in Texas the ager shook us up stairs and down, fever took the children away, and the old woman and the mules and Timothy sot right down and pined away to shadders?'

'And you are moving?'

'We're a joggin,' stranger, kinder joggin' along and around, lookin' for a place to squat. The old woman sights for North Carolina, and Timothy he'd git up on his hind legs and howl if we were pinted that way, but I thought we'd jog a little further.'

'Well I'm sorry for you said the reporter.

'Bleeged to you, stranger, I've tried to keep a stiff backbone, and I guess I kin see this thing through, but when a fellow remembers what those mules was, and see 'em now, it's nuff to break his heart, to say nuthin' about Timothy under the wagon, a dog who was brung up on the fat o' the land in North Carolina, and who haint used to sorrow and grief!' And he climbed into the wagon pushed on the lines, and the mules moved slowly on their way.

A bashful and not over-educated fellow went to see his girl the other night, and as he started away he put his arms around her and whispered in her ear "dearest, I love;" and she responded sweetly, "ditto,' meaning, of course, a reciprocation of his tender passion. The young man could not find "ditto" in his vocabulary, and asked his father the next day as they were hoeing cabbage, what it meant. The old gent rested a moment on his hoe, and pointed to the cabbage in front of him with the remark: "You see that cabbage?" "Yes;" responded the youth. "And you see the next one there?" "Yes.' "Well that is called "ditto.', "Damn her!' exclaimed the impetuous youth, "she called me a cabbage head.'

A farmer on the road between Charlton and Worcester, Mass; having been terribly annoyed by drummers, put up a sign: 'No sewing machines wanted here. Got one. It was no use; the next drummer wanted to see the machine, 'and perhaps he'd hitch up a trade.' So the farmer put up: "Got the small-pox here.' That worked well for a little while, but then came along a drummer frightfully pitted with the small-pox, who smilingly said: "Seein' you've got it bad here they've put me on this route."

There is an editor over in East Florida who calls cotton "the fleecy staple." The next thing he will probably do will be to term a locomotive "the iron horse," and then some ship will be wrecked and he'll mention the "ill fated vessel" and then we'll think of him with disrespect and won't go on an editorial excursion with him.—Pensacola Gazette.

Buy not, sell not, where self-respect is bartered, for that once lost, the main spring of honor is rusted and decayed.

Hillsborough Recorder.

WEDNESDAY.....AUG. 4. 1875.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE.

Before this issue reaches most of our subscribers the election will have been over, and the good accomplished or the evil done. Two years ago the question of constitutional reform was before you in another shape. The legislative mode of amendment was before you. It was a small boon which was granted to you under the Constitution and we advised you to embrace that opportunity of getting such reforms as were within your reach, believing that you would have no better opportunity of bettering your condition and that constitutional reform could never be reached thoroughly by the hands of the people. Providentially, as it seemed, the Legislature of last winter was Democratic by so large a majority that we immediately urged that advantage be taken of it to make thorough and wholesale reforms in the Constitution. Such opportunity does not present itself more than once in a generation and whether the people have availed themselves of it or not we will not reproach ourselves for lack of wisdom or lack of regard for the welfare of the people that we advised to that course.

The Constitution of 1868 was faulty in its very inception. It did not spring from the calls of the people but the demands of a military despotism. It did not provide for the wants of the people but for those who shaped the action of the Convention for the creation of offices and the good of office holders. It did not frame sound organic law but made fleeting and temporary legislation of permanent binding effect. It did not consider the sparse population of the State, nor its impoverishment, but made its offices to correspond to a densely settled territory and its salaries based upon exhaustless wealth. It created many more offices than were needed and it paid the holders of those offices more than they earned by the performance of their duties. It burdened the people with taxes by the creation and support of penal and charitable institutions for which there was no demand, or in which the burden might properly have been shared with the tax payers by those who were able when possessed of sufficient private means.

But the whole subject has been under review and by this time has had the weight of popular verdict. If the people have voted for the Democratic candidates and the Democratic party has a majority in the Convention, then such a change will have been brought about, that public prosperity will rebound as from the removal of a great weight upon it. If on the contrary the radicals should be in the majority, then the people will have loaded themselves with chains they can never shake off. They have handed themselves over to the hands of their enemies, and they will never free themselves again unless through the violence of revolution.

But as we write the prospects are so bright, and all accounts so cheering, that it is impossible to anticipate calamity voluntarily sought and calmly invited.

To those whom this paper may reach before the day of election we have only one word of advice. Remember that this is probably the last struggle at the polls between the Democrat and the Radical. If the latter controls in the Convention, he will make farther struggle fruitless, because he is going to found his power so deep that it will not be shaken.

Civil Rights is what the Radicals are aiming at. Not Civil Rights either, because the negro has all that he needs, but social rights, such as John Page demands when he says, that there shall be no difference between the white and the black in anything if the radicals control the Convention.

The Constitution is the campaign Organ of the Radical party in Raleigh. Its local editor is a colored man. Think of that, ye men the Constitution seeks to convert to radicalism!

Does that look like Civil rights? Colored editors, colored lawyers, colored Judges—these all come from the party that wants to control the Convention.

After the election, we hope to give our readers more varied editorial matter. We have been compelled to feed them on the unvarying dish of State politics. They are tired of the diet, no doubt, but if they have profited by our regimen, and have all voted as we have endeavored to persuade them to do, we will vary the repast, and treat them to some of the many subjects now the food of thought for the busy world outside of the limits of our now—we hope—enfranchised State.

NORFOLK, July 31.—Gen'l Geo. E. Pickett, the distinguished general in the confederate service died to-day after a brief illness, aged fifty.

TO OUR ORANGE READERS.

For many weeks past we have abstained from all reference to the troubles which early in the campaign settled around the nominations in Orange county. We have not been provoked to it though we were perfectly aware of most causeless and ungenerous attacks upon us at the different tax gatherings in the county, which engagements elsewhere made it impossible for us to attend. We were content to leave the solution of all troubles with the people of Orange, always loyal to party, always true to principle. We were content to leave our own vindication with the same people who had convincing evidence of our own loyalty, and who had brain enough to know that opposition to an individual did not involve integrity of principle.

The people of Orange acquiesced in the nomination of May, whether cheerfully or not we will not undertake to say. But there has been no overt opposition after the failure to effect it at Cedar Grove.

We do not assume to express any personal satisfaction at this condition of things, since to do so, would involve the sacrifice of self respect. Mr. Turner has made it impossible for us to regard him as a candidate acceptable to us. But we write to call attention to the fact that neither in the Recorder nor in the News have we made any reference to the introduction of any other candidate since the Cedar Grove Meeting, as charged in a recent issue of the Sentinel, but have preserved most absolute silence upon this subject.

And the people of Orange will bear witness to the accuracy of this statement.

Who will Prove a Renegrade to his Race? Not the negro certainly! The negro has long ago fixed the color line. If you want to gain him you must go to him. White men stand to your colors! A democratic majority and white rule. A radical majority in the convention and civil rights and negro rule. Which do you prefer?—Wil. Star.

THUNDER IT INTO THE EARS OF THE "NEGRO-EQUALITIESTS!"

That they have insulted the white women of North Carolina by endorsing as a party measure the infamous Civil Rights Bill.

That their Executive Committee have declared that they must not intimate that the Civil Rights Bill is wrong in principle.

That one Campbell, a pet orator of the party and candidate for convention, regrets that the Bill is not more severe.

That Greasy Sam Watts, a Judge and leader of the party, says he is glad the law was passed

That R. C. Badger, another recognized party leader, says he is himself a colored man.

That Judge Buxton, a Radical candidate for convention, decides that a negro man and a white woman can marry with impunity.

That wherever the negroes are in the majority in a county they have negro candidates for convention.

That in every Eastern county where the Radicals have an assured majority they have either a negro or a white man who is in favor of the Civil Rights Bill as their candidate.

That John Page, a Radical negro candidate for convention, says: The Radicals mean to give the white folks hell, damn'em! and that there will be no color distinction in any thing. If negro men want to marry white women they can do so.

It should be remembered that though a Federal Judge in Tennessee has decided the Civil Rights Bill unconstitutional, he did so on the grounds that the Regulation of such matters belongs exclusively to the States. If a State makes such a law it is Constitutional, otherwise not. That is the gist of the decision.

CINCINNATI, July 31.—The Gazette's Greenville special says: "This morning at about 2 o'clock ex-President Andrew Johnson died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. W. R. Brown, formerly Mrs. Col. Stover, in Carter county, from a paralytic stroke.

'He had been in rather bad health since the adjournment of the last session of Congress, but nothing serious was anticipated. On Wednesday he left on the train for Carter's station, and from thence he went on horseback to his daughter's residence, about seven miles, riding in the hot sun. Arriving there he felt very fatigued, and the same afternoon about 4 o'clock his right side was paralysed, rendering him speechless. His wife was with him at the time. His son Frank, and his daughter, Mrs. Patterson, were at once sent for, and left Greenville on Thursday.

'About noon Thursday he became conscious, and had a partial use of his side again; but it was evident that the great commoner could not live long, and thus surrounded by his entire family and neighboring friends he yield up the ghost about 2 o'clock this morning.

'The excitement here and at Knoxville is intense. It is expected that a large delegation will arrive from Knoxville to attend the funeral. A public meeting is in session at the court-house, which will make arrangements to receive visitors from abroad. The funeral will take place at Greenville on Tuesday, August 3rd. The body will arrive here (Greenville) to-morrow.

'Great many distinguished persons from all sections are sending telegrams to this place, stating their desire to be present at the last sad rites. The family are greatly overcome with their sad bereavement, in which they have the sympathy of the whole community.'

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Attorney General Pierrepont said yesterday in response to the question whether he had recently received any accounts of Ku Klux outrages, that he had received none since he had occupied his present position.

The number of applications for pardon is not so large as heretofore; the circular issued several months ago by the Attorney-General on that subject being more rigid in its requirements than the former course.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue was visited by a delegation to-day representing the whiskey interests. They were appointed by a convention recently held in Cincinnati. They agreed in favor of a modification of the regulations concerning the traffic in spirituous liquors, &c. The commissioner will give their views careful attention.

The Comptroller of Currency advises the Secretary of the Treasury of the issue of $1. 470, 500 of national bank circulation in the month ending 28th instant, 80 per cent of which is to be retired in legal-tender notes, making the whole amount of legal-tender notes retired since the passage of the act of January 14th last, $7,244 892. The national bank circulation outstanding at this date is $350, 512,538.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Duncan Sherman & Co. suspended this morning The suspension causes great excitement in Wall street. Gold has gone up to 114¼

NEW YORK, July 27.—The doors of Duncan, Sherman & Co. were closed at 11:25 o'clock A. M. only in a general way can the causes of the suspension be ascertained. It is admitted that the house has lost very largely on cotton; in fact, that is the principal source of loss. Involvements with various railroad enterprises, old and new, also entailed losses. The liabilities of the firm are understood to be between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

NEW YORK, July 29—The Trenton Banking Company, of Trenton, N. J; which lost $150,000 by Jay Cooke, lose $100,000 by Duncan Sherman & co.

The Tribune says a responsible officer of one of the largest banks in the city stated to a reporter yesterday that Duncan, Sherman &co. had nearly $700,000 tied up in securities of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company, of which Duncan was the president and the firm the fiscal agents and a small amount in the Selma and Gulf railroad, an incomplete scheme adopted after the panic of 1873.

It is understood, also says the Tribune, that in one of their settlements Duncan, Sherman & Co. had been obliged to take $300,000 in Alabama State bonds, which are now quoted at 35 cents in the dollar.

It appears that transfers of real estate have been recorded at the Register's office this week on the part of William Butler Duncan and other members of the suspended firm to the amount of $1,250,000. The deeds just recorded date from 1868 to 1874 The name of the grantee is freshly inserted in a different handwriting from the body of the deed.

Judge Shipman, the assignee of Duncan, Sherman & co; states that he knowns nothing of the arrangements made for circular notes in the hands of travellers issued by the house.

PARIS July 28.—Many letters have been received here from Americans in various parts of the continent holding letters of credit issued by Duncan, Sherman & co; which have been dishonored, inquiring about them. It was rumored here to-day that the English and American bankers would accept Duncan, Sherman & Co.'s circular notes. There was much disappointment when the report was found to be untrue.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Commodore Cooper telegraphs to the Navy Department that he fears there is some local cause for the fever at Barrancas. The sick are well cared for and there is no panic

Jas. Gilfillen, the present cashier of the Treasury, has been appointed chief clerk in the Treasury Department.

There is growing trouble between Secretary Bristow and Treasurer New, regarding the employees in the office of the Treasurer.

Professor Janney telegraphs the Secretary of the Interior that he has found gold in paying quantities in the Black Hills. A good head of water amply sufficient for washing purposes He reports miners pouring into the hills from all directions.

CINCINNATI, July 27.—A dispatch from New Orleans states that a riot is apprehended at East Felicia, where the negroes have assumed the offensive and are collecting and arming throughout the parish for the supposed purpose of capturing the town of Clarion. Great excitement prevails in the parish. A number of whites have armed and congregated to patrol the town. A bad feeling has existed between the races in that parish for some months.

NEW YORK, July 27.—During a fearful thunder storm yesterday a bolt of lightning struck a carriage in a funeral cortege, knocking the driver from the box and fatally injuring him. The occupants of the carriage were thrown into the road, but without serious injury.

The Asheville Citizen says, we have before us a secret circular sent out to an office-holder under the Grant radical government, from Washington City, calling on him for a remittance of ten dollars, for campaign purposes, to help the radical party in the State and National campaigns.

Men are not allowed to hold office under Grant for merit, but only for the amount of dirty party work they may do.

And the way they demand money from 'subs" is unique. They add simply that 'in replying that name of the post office, State, date, and name of the writer should be written clearly, in order that credit may be given." Which is to say, 'if you don't respond, some body else's name will occupy your place before very long.'

We call on Gen. Hampton to tell the people how much he has been assessed to help keep the outrageous revenue party on them.

TROUBLES AT CHESTER, S. C.

The Charlotte Observer says we learn from a gentleman who arrived in the city last night from Chester, S. C; that a riot was imminent in the streets of the town at the time the train left. Yesterday was the day for the election of Sheriff of Chester county, and the candidates were Walker, Conservative, and Richardson, negro Radical. At last reports Walker was over 700 ahead. Parties are very much divided and Judge Mackey, a few days ago, made a speech in favor of Walker. As he left the Court House, he was met by Richardson, who told him he had lied in the use of a certain expression in his speech, whereupon Mackey proceeded to cane him.

The difficulty, yesterday, was between Walker and Richardson negroes, and the whites were not involved. The negroes were all drunk and were assembled in the public square, armed with heavy revolvers. When our informant left, some shooting had taken place and one negro had been shot, it is thought fatally. The business houses had all been closed, and the citizens were apprehensive of a general riot.

Horner & Graves' School opened this week with splendid prospects, sixty five cadets being present. We are glad to see this recognition of the merits of an institution which has no superior of its kind in the County. The large patronage of the school is especially flattering at a time when the pecuniary resources of the country is so severely strained.

Levy & Brothers Richmond invite attention to their attractive advertisement. Goods are low everywhere, but Levys are lower than others and his goods are of superior quality. We have tested that fully.

Farmers will read with interest the advertisement of the well known Agricultural Warehouse of H. M. Smith &co of Richmond Va. Destroyed partially by fire last spring, the establishment has sprung. Phœnix like from its ashes, and is now better prepared to supply the wants of the public than ever before. It is only necessary to mention H. M. Smith &co to suggest a firm every way capable of meeting every want of the farmer in the way of Agricultural implements.

Fine Rains.

The excessively hot weather of last week which begat fears of drought, was relieved on Sunday evening by copious and general rains. The corn crop is almost considered made, and is a fine one.

Farmers should not be too impatient to run their wheat into market. Crops in the west are seriously injured by wet weather and those in Europe are damaged by flood, wheat will be higher than it is now. At the same time we caution against the expectation of exorbitant prices. There is enough wheat of the old crop on hand to keep prices within reasonable boundaries, and money is too scarce to justify very high prices.

Midnight Meeting.

It is understood that the negroes at their midnight meetings expressed their determination to cut loose from the white trash and support their own race. Here is the color line drawn by the negro. White man, stand upon it.

This meeting was held here, in Hillsboro, where white republicans have been weak enough to let themselves be placed on the ticket with negroes, and they subject themselves to be called white trash by their colored brethren.

Looking for it.

Our Sheriff finds it hard work this season to collect the taxes. The money is not forth coming at Chapel Hill. It appears that he becomes somewhat desperate and undertook a general search of the village to see where all the money was hidden and in peeping into the old well in the Campus he parted company with his spectacles. The money may still be there, for the Sheriff was dissuaded from further search.

For the Recorder.

MR. EDITOR:—Since writing last, nothing of very great moment, or interest, has transpired around old Caldwell. Sheriff Hughes was here on the 10th inst, in obedience to the time honored custom of the Sheriff, paying his annual visit, to a people who are always prompt, and ready to pay their taxes; and who delight to honor a man so punctual, and so worthy of their confidence. While we all regret, the temporary panic which he spread in his annual round, yet all, pleased, and charmed by his genial manners polite attention, and strict punctuality to business, seem to forget their pecuniary embarrassment, and are united in the belief that no better, or more truth-worthy man, could be found in old Orange; Who would serve them more faithfully in such a capacity?

Sheriff Hughes was accompanied by the Hon. Josiah Turner, who addressed the citizens of Caldwell a 2 o'clock p m. upon the Convention question in his usual impressive and forcible style.

He argued, at length, upon the necessity of a Convention; pointing out with force, and precision, the defects of our present Canby Constitution, which was "born in the throes of military reconstruction," one which has been enforced and perpetrated by unscrupulous demagogues, and corrupt officials.

He painted in "striking colors" our political sky, as it appeared in 1868'69, ruffled and torn, and stained, and blackened, by the dark, sullen, cloud of Radicalism, which loomed up and hung, like a pall of gloom, and despair, over us pouring from its threatening bosom, all the contamination, and filth of corruption, and the "suffocating odor of infernal knavery," blighting every high, and pleasing aspiration, that was cherished in the hearts of young North Carolinians, and blasting almost every hope, and interest, of the hard-working, and honest farmer. He recalled, in touching, and patriotic terms, the roguery, and the robberies of Holden, Littlefield, Swepson, &co, and also the infamy, and perfidy, and disgrace of the Kirk and Bergen was. He told the people also how the corrupt-officials and political communants of the Radical party were working now,—playing tricks, devising plans, setting traps, and snares, and doing everything in their power to elect a Radical majority to the Convention, in order that they may have an opportunity of carrying out their base intentions, and executing their hellish designs. He told the people also of the impending danger of defeat in the coming contest,—and of the responsibility that rested upon each individual voter. But I must stop. Already, Mr. Editor, I fear I have done you an injustice as well as Mr. Turner by devoting so much time and space to an honest endeavor to give a brief tho' imperfect outline of his able speech.

Mr. Duke was here, too, and that was all. He took shelter and repose beneath the foliage of a large oak while the flies entertained him, alone "chanted the anthem of his wondrous praise." He said nothing,—did nothing,—made nothing, and a great many concluded that he, himself, was nothing. He must have felt the "rugged reality of listless despair," for he seemed like the last remnant of Radical putrefaction; endeavoring to infuse decay into the solidified element of that Democracy, which upholds Caldwell, and wreaths her in a halo of renown. But enough of Duke; the old fellow will feel bad enough by this time next week any way; so I commend him to the attention of those who can sympathize with him.

Caldwell has been favored with an unusual abundance of rain within the last few weeks. No great damage has been done, however, to the crops. Corn is suffering more now, for the want of work, than for the want of rain. Farmers in this section, have been prevented from giving the necessary amount of work to corn, on account of so much rain, but notwithstanding this, corn is still looking finely, and there is every prospect for an unusually good crop.

Mr. E. Turner is enlarging and improving his grist mill, and will soon have in successful operation one of the best mills in the county.

Mr. L. W. Hall is preparing to enlarge and improve his dwelling house, and to build some offices for accommodation of pupils at the Caldwell Academy.

Hurrah for Caldwell!

Caldwell has a Croquet club, and every evening is devoted to its interest.

While the last sunshine of expiring day,
In summer's twilight, is weeping itself away, the young ladies of Caldwell and the pupils of the Academy amuse, delight, and recreate themselves, with an exciting game of Croquet. Come down here, Mr. "Compromise" if you want to see the expertness of you "up towns and down towns" surpassed.

Excitement is growing here, as the election draws nigh. Look out and listen, Mr. Editor, for good and cheering news from old Caldwell next week. She will show her patriotism, and what she is, at the ballot box on next Thursday. More anon.

"SAMBO."

A man suspected of being Partin, the wife murderer, was seen skulking in the woods of Chatham and Randolph and was pursued.

Mr. Sam'l Merrill, Superintendent of the Raleigh gas works was severly stabbed in the left side just above the heart, by a man named Dick Thompson at Forestville on Wednesday evening last. Mr. Merrill was brought to Raleigh by a special train, and lies in a somewhat precarious situation. The assailant made his escape.

THE CROQUET MATCH.

COL. JOHN D. CAMERON:

Dear Sir—According to promise I will give you the final result of the Croquet game between the Up Towns and Down Towns that was to come off on Monday afternoon. The Down Town Club found the Up Towns on the Croquet ground eager for the contest, and no less assured of success, whilst the Down Towns were equally sanguine. After a cordial greeting and participation in ice cream and other refreshments, the game commenced—which lasted about two hours—resulting in favor of the Down Towns, as it did on Saturday evening, giving them the best two in three. And now to the gentleman that won the wager, to say that he was jubilant, would not convey the idea. I never saw one more perfectly elated at success; to say nothing of the forlorn looser who walked off with his head drooped like a "Big Sunflower" muttering that he was always on the unlucky side. The ladies of both clubs deserve compliments for expert playing, and I can speak only in the highest terms of all; and too much cannot be said for the little Greensboro lady who glided so gracefully over the Croquet ground with an equanimity and steady poise which was never in the least excited by the vociferous cheers that resounded through the air at each stroke of the mallet, and much credit is awarded the Leaksville lady for the success of their club on Saturday evening. The lady from Chapel Hill played remarkably well. One of the Hillsboro ladies could not be excelled in her playing—and I will ascribe her much praise for her skillful engineering of the strokes of her club. Your correspondent will close by hoping the two clubs and their friends may meet again soon and meet as they last parted full of love and the best of friends.

STATE NEWS.

Seven thousand bales of cotton, have been shipped from Monroe since the opening of the rail road to that place.

Gen'l Longstreet was in Charlotte last week to gather up materials for making up his "personal record at the battle of Gettysburg."

A negro boy 12 or 14 years old broke his neck while diving of one of the docks at Wilmington.

The Rev. Mr. Hughes of the Episcopal Church will preach regularly hereafter at Winston on the second Sunday of each month.

Mr. Reuben Barrow has presented the Editor of the Winston Sentinel with a tomato weighing 2¼ pounds.

Last week Sheriff Jones, the Radical candidate for Convention in Yadkin co, going home with a drunken party in his liquor wagon fell in with a man named Jennings who reproved some of the Jones party for their disorderly conduct. A man among them named Hedrick drew his pistol and shot Jennings dead.

The murderer is in jail.

The Bridge across Buffalo creek has been finished and trains on the Carolina Central will run to Shelby in about three weeks.

Bishop Lyman is now on a tour through the western part of the State, and preaching in the counties beyond the mountains.

A terrific hailstorm passed over Abbottsburg last week. The house of Mr. Wm Drews was demolished, Mr. Drews' cloths were literally torn off from him and he was severely injured.

THE CHARLOTTE DEMOCRAT.—This sterling and very safely independent journal has just entered upon its 24th year. It has attained substantial success, and brother Yates is one of the few journalists in the State who can look around him with complacent satisfaction at a prosperity the fruits of professional application. We hope that the success of the 24 years may be expanded through the growth of the twenty-four more years, because it will be deserved. Differing sometimes in non-essentials, we always accord to brother Yates' honesty of purpose and manliness of expression.—Raleigh News.

The News expresses our sentiments so well that we can only add that Mr. Yates is the kindest and courteous of neighbors, so that it is a pleasure to publish a paper in the same city with him.—Charlotte Observer.

We highly appreciate the complimentary notices of several of our North Carolina brethern, but we copy the above paragraph from two of our esteemed cotemporaries not merely for the purpose off letting our readers see what they say of us, but because we want an opportunity of acknowledging their kindness. Col. J. D. Cameron, Editor of the Raleigh News, and Col. Chas. R. Jones, Editor of the Charlotte Observer, and the Editor of the Democrat, are natives of the same Town, County and State, and we are sure that we feel proud of them as honorable gentlemen, talented editors, and hard-working men. We never had anything but the kindest feeling for a newspaper man or a printer, and we are always pleased when they are successful in the printing business or any other occupation.

The allusion to our success, pecuniarily, will excuse us for saying that we never made a dollar in any other way than by conducting a Printing Office and by close application to business. For whatever success we have attained as a publisher we attribute to close application to our office business and knowing, practically, how to print a newspaper. If we had not thoroughly understood the printing business, the "Rings" would have broken us down long ago; but, providentially, we have been enabled by a strong arm and some mechanical skill to triumph over all sorts of unfair and unjust combination, whether open or secret.

HINTS ABOUT WORK.

Field labor can hardly be subject to the same rules as in-door work. The more quickly the crops can be harvested and housed, the safer they will be. Extra hours can scarcely be avoided when the rush of work comes, and reasonable men will not object to it if the work is fairly compensated. In many years of farm work we have always finished up at four o'clock on Saturdays, and never worked on a Sunday, yet never lost a pound of hay or of grain by observing these rules.

Bathing is not only a great preservative of the health, but it promotes comfort. If there is no convenient shed or out-building where a tub of water can be used for this purpose every evening, arrange a portion of the barn for bathing. Take a washtub with two or three pails of cold water, a large sponge or piece of flannel, and a piece of castile soap. Dash a few spongefuls of water over the whole body, then wash with soap and water, rinse off, and rub dry with a coarse towel. This is a part of the daily training of the professional athlete, as it hardens the muscles, induces healthful and not debilitating perspiration, and sound restful sleep. Induce the hired men o bathe every night; they will work all the better.

Horses should have every attention that can ease their labor. It is not humane to to turn a horse that has worked all day in the reaper, into a poor pasture, to pick his feed during the whole night, or lie and rest with a half filled stomach. If horses are turned out at night, they should first be well fed. Wash the legs with carbolic soap suds. Give drink frequently. Frost cold water from the well is highly injurious; the water should be as warm as the air, and a handful of finely ground meal should be stirred in each drink.

Cows will need some succulend feed. The thinnings and suckers from the cornfield will supply this. Let a boy take a wheelbarrow along a few rows, and gather a mess of fodder avery afternoon.

The fly which produces the 'grub in the head' will trouble the flock. The sheep, when that is present, will run with their heads to the ground, and stamp with the fore feet. Rub some pine tar on their noses and keep it fresh and sticky. Tar is a good tonic, and helps sheep to resist other parasites. Keep them out of low wet pastures which produce "rot." Milk the udders of ewes which have lost their lambs. See that the lambs have fresh tender pasture. Roughness" will not do for lambs.

Clover and orchard grass ought to have been cut before this. If not cut, lose no time in doing it; every day's delay greatly reduces the value of the hay. Timothy should not go past full blossom, unless to be left for seed. Red-top may be cut last of all. If there are a few loads of fine manure on hand, they will be of great use upon the freshly mown meadows.—Agriculturist.

HOW TO KNOW THE AGE OF A HORSE.

The colt is born with twelve grinders. When four front teeth have made their appearance, the colt is twelve days old; and when the next four come forth, it is four weeks old. When the corner teeth appear, the colt is eight months old, and when the latter have attained the height of the front teeth, it is one year old.

The two year old colt has the kernel—the dark substance in the middle of the tooth's crown—ground out of all the front teeth.

In the third year the middle front teeth are being shifted, and when three years old these are substituted for the horse teeth. The next four teeth are shifted in the fourth year, and the corner teeth in the fifth.

At six years the kernel is worn out of the middle front teeth and the bridle teeth have now attained to their full growth.

At seven years a hook has been formed by the corner teeth of the jaw; the kernel of the teeth next at the middle front is worn out, and the bridle teeth begin to wear off.

At eight years of age, the kernel is worn out of all the lower front teeth and upper fronts.

In the ninth year the kernel has wholly disappeared from the upper middle front teeth, the hook on the corner tooth has increased in size, as the bridle teeth lose their point.

In the tenth year the kernel has worn out of the teeth next to the middle front of the upper jaw; and in the eleventh year the kernel has entirely vanished from the corner teeth of the same jaw.

At twelve years old the crown of all the front teeth in the lower jaw have become triangular, and the bridle teeth are much worn down. As the horse advances in age, the gums shrink away from the teeth, which consequently receive a long narrow appearance, and their kernels have been metamorphosed into a darkish point, gray hairs increase in the fore-head, over the chin assumes the form of an eagle.

THE COMING CORN CROP.

There is every indication that the coming crop of corn will be the largest on record, not excepting the great one of 1872. Many causes combine to this end. In the West a large quantity of wheat was plowed up and planted with corn under the impression that the wheat was to much injured by the severe winter to pay, and then in the Eastern States the prospect for hay was so poor that wherever corn could be planted it was put in, so that the fodder might in some measure make up for the deficiency of the hay. It is estimated that the acreage of corn is fully one-fourth more than last year, and if so this is an enormous increase. From all sections the crop is reported as growing finely, and with the increased acreage an immense yield may be confidently anticipated.

CANVASSERS wanted for two superb works of French art, "Little Runaway and her Pets" and the pretty pair, "The Dinner and the Nap." These pictures are worthy of a place in costly homes and inexpensive enough for the simplest. JAMES VICK, dec. 15 Rochester, N. Y.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875.

EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

THE ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

A Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out.

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the production of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of The Aldine will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, The Aldine is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times the cost; and then, there is the Chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of The Aldine, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with The Aldine, is an important feature and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of The Aldine is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention,

"MAN'S UNSELFISH FRIEND."

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so to true the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

In Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all The Aldine pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 3,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

1 Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE 1 year, the Chromo and the Art Union, $6.00 per annum, in advance.

No charge for postage.

Specimen Copies of The Aldine, 50 cents.
